Project Description

The Secretary's Office of Global Partnerships serves as the entry point for private sector engagement at the Department of State and works to actively promote public-private partnerships (PPP). We define these as a collaborative working relationship with government and non-government partners, such as, private sector, universities, and nongovernmental organizations.

We are excited to promote our work through innovative design to our partners and potential networks through infographics – or graphic representations of information that can be shared widely to our recipients. Our office is seeking an imaginative and inspired intern to lend their creative design to develop infographics that explain public-private partnerships. These products will serve as a models in workshops, trainings and featured in our department's internal Innovation webpage viewable to agents of change and influence in the foreign and civil service at the State Department.

If you are interested in leveraging your skills in design and data visualization you will collaborate and engage with our Innovation Team. We are a small but inspired group that actively works to promote innovative strategies, designs and tools to our organization.

A recommended commitment 1 -2 hours a week is required.

We encourage the innovative and inspired to seek out this incredible opportunity to support U.S. public diplomacy. This is a fantastic opportunity to participate and contribute to our committed efforts at bringing innovation to the Department of State.
